TAKEN OFF IN A GALE.
A Wrecked Schooner's Crew Gallantly Rescued Off Cape Henry.

The three-masted schooner Edith B. Evans, owned by P. W. Wheaton, of Philadelphia, and bound with 555 tons of coal from Washawton for Richmond, foundered in a gale six miles off Cape Henry last Monday. The captain and crew climbed to the top masts, which stuck twenty feet out of water when the vessel settled on the bottom. Oliver Kearney, a seaman, was washed overboard and drowned.

The men clung to the tops of the masts for twenty-four hours, when they were seen by the Old Dominion steamer Wyandott, which was on her way to New York. Men from the Wyandott lowered a boat and tried for three hours to reach the wreck. While they were struggling against wind and sea one of the men on the masts, Frederick Whitehall, the steward, died from cold and exhaustion.

A second and more successful attempt was made to reach the wreck when the boat returned. Capt. Joseph Camp, Master James Ingersoll, and Steward Andrew Harkin and W. A. Leachon were brought off to the Wyandott in safety. They were landed in this port yesterday.

A DEAD SEA SERPENT AT CAPE MAY.
It Rembles the One Seen Off the Jersey Coast Last Summer.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
CAPE MAY, Nov. 3.—A dead sea serpent is the attraction now at Sewell's Point. It was discovered Tuesday by H. W. Hand, Jr., and Harry Ludlum, of this city, as they were gunning for meadow birds. The boys thought it to be a log that had been stranded, but on closer examination their minds were disabused of the idea. The lads measured it with their guns and found it eleven and a half feet long and the body two feet thick just back of its head, which is shaped like a whale's, and from which point the body tapers gradually to its pointed tail. Coarse thick hair covers its shark-like skin and somewhat eaten it in places, but there is enough of the creature left to suggest the idea that it is a veritable sea serpent.

A local naturalist is examining and dissecting the probable sea-serpent and trying to find out to what order of marine animals it belongs. The late storm is supposed to have been the means of getting it in the breakers and beheading it. The sea birds have somewhat eaten it in places, but there is enough of the creature left to suggest the idea that it is a veritable sea serpent.
